

A sessional worker required to develop the “mini food growing training plots” project

South Seeds are looking for a motivated person with both practical and communications skills to work on a short life project. We need a sessional worker to install raised beds and ensure the site is ready for growing when the outdoor temperature starts to rise at the end of March 2015. While working on the site, we want the sessional worker to market the opportunity to people in the local community, so enough interest is generated by the time the site is ready.

Each raised bed, which will be approximately 1 metre by 1 metre square, will be assigned to a person or organisation so that they can learn about food growing in a space they have responsibility for. The sessional worker will creatively market this opportunity, including some leaflet drops and door knocking in the local area, and create a list of interested people and organisations.

With the assistance of South Seeds, the sessional worker will match up people to plots. We require the sessional worker to also orientate the growers before they start, for example: ensure they are aware of health and safety issues, by producing an induction pack and running an induction session.

In early March we will be advertising for a sessional worker to run weekly growing sessions for the people who take up the plots.
